

STREAP: Gaelic Medium Education

Postgraduate Certificate School of Education

Streap is appropriate for:

Nursery, primary and secondary school teachers who are registered with the GTCS.
Streap is fully-funded by the Scottish Government.

What is Streap?

- A teaching certificate (60 credit points) at Masters' level, delivered by Aberdeen University and Sabhal Mòr Ostaig.
- An opportunity to improve your own Gaelic skills (writing, reading, talking and listening).
- An opportunity to extend your knowledge of Gaelic medium education and to learn more about subjects such as bilingualism and immersion.
- An opportunity to meet and work alongside other teachers who are involved in teaching through the medium of Gaelic.

How is Streap run?

- Streap is a distance learning programme, with three face-to-face meetings, which runs for an academic year.
- Participants will receive language support from a language tutor, and support on other aspects of the programme from a mentor.
- Most of the programme is delivered online.
- The programme is assessed both formatively and summatively.

Past participants' views on Streap:

"It's great to get the opportunity to meet other teachers and other people involved in Gaelic medium education and to hear their views."

"Very useful, and the face-to-face sessions are good fun."

"It is useful to see how people in Gaelic medium education teach."

"Useful information that we can use in our own schools."
